A New Fish for the Susquehanna River. It has already been noticed in our reports of the Linnman society, that Prof. Stauffer had found a new fish in the waters of the Susquehanna. To a representative of the Intelligencer Mr. S. gives the following additional information on the subject : "It is desirable to call the attention of the fishermen along the Susquehanna river to a 'game fish,' a specimen lately taken below the dam at Columbia, and very considerately preserved in alcohol by Mr. George F. Rathvon and sent to his father, Prof. S. S. Rathvon, for a name, since it was pronounced a new fish by old fishermen. This was submitted to me as the chairman on ichthiology of the Linnæan society. From a careful measurement. count of spring and spineless fin-rays, their length and position, scales, lateral line, opercle, etc., it fully accorded with the description of a fish named by that eccentric naturalist, Rafenesque, as the Ambloplites rupestris. But, as this fish was only known to occur in western waters, or Lake Erie, I wished to be certain of the name, and on February 24th, 1880. I sent a carefully made drawing and observation to Hon. S. F. Baird, secretary of Smithsonian institution, who is also the U. S. commissioner of fish and fisheries. In a reply dated February 26, Saturday, reached me on Monday, March 1st inst., he says: 'The fish represented is evidently Ambloplites rupestris. The finding of it in the Susquehanna is of great interest.' Asking to retain the drawing and borrow the specimen for examination and compare it with Prof. Cope's description of A. cavifrons and the western species, I sent it on as desired. On March 4th, Prof. Baird says: 'There is no doubt as to its being the species named; it is not at all like the description of A. cavifrons.' He desired to retain it a little while longer for closer study.

"I state the foregoing to show its importance and with a hope to acquire further facts. A vague report has been stated that a similar fish was captured two years ago. What we wish to know is: Has it been introduced in the Susquehanna? If so, by whom? Can any other person report having caught this odd bass, or sunfish. The fin on the back (or the dorsal fin) has 11 spinous rays and 11 soft rays, the last at the end project, at the tips. The fin, is continuous, the ventrical rear fins also project backwards, near the tail fin, which latter is slightly notched (emarginated). In short, it differs from all the other fish common to our waters, and can easily be detected, once attention is called facts made known, by observation and extending over the new cupola recently enquiry. What is it? Send it to one that erected on the southwest corner of the may 'fish out of books' what you fished passeger depot. The wires belong to the out of water. You, therefore, are equally Pensylvania railroad company, the berry street, on Wednesday afternoon at entitled to your share of the credit, and to Western Union and the American Union

PALM SUNDAY.

Its Observance in the Courches Yesterday-Bishop Shanahan at St. Mary's. Yesterday was Palm Sunday, and in the Catholic, Episcopal, Lutheran, Moravian, and other churches in which ceremonial commemoration is made of events in the passion and death of the Saviour, there were special services, in observance of Christ's triumphal entry into Jerusalem, when the people cut boughs from the trees and spread them in His path, singing hosanna to the Son of David. Although the last Sunday in the sombre Lenten season, and the first day of the week of solemn observances and religious discipline which, especially in the Catholic church, precede the festival of the resurrection, yet the day brought with it a gleam of joyousness that seemed to lighten the gloom that has prevailed the churches since the present season was entered upon. The day was delightfully bright and exhilarating. It was cool and dry and crisp, as March weather ought to be, and all day long the undimmed sunshine bathed the city in floods of brightness. There was a tint of frost in the morning air, but as the sun rose higher this disappeared. The pursaits of the people were in accordance with the bright and cheerful weather, as was evidenced by the large congregation present at all the morning services.

In the several Catholic churches chancels and sanctuaries were decked cheerfully with palms, which relieved the sober purple coverings of the pictures and other ornaments. At St. Anthony's, St. Joseph's and St. Mary's, early mass was largely attended, and in the latter, at 10:30 the church was crowded. Right Reverend Bishop Shanahan conducted the service of the blessing of the palms, at the conclusion of which congregation were invited to sanctuary where each member was presented with a small sprig of green as a memento of the occasion. By many these palms are preserved until the following Ash Wednesday, when their ashes are used to mark the brows of the faithful. After the distribution high mass was celebrated by Father Ignatius, being the same as on other Sundays, excepting that the history of the passion, as related by St. Matthew, was read. In the other Catholic churches similar services were held.

In the Episcopal churches the observance was confined to the readin of the collects for the day. In a number of the other churches pulpit topics especially suitable to the occasion occupied the attention of the preachers, and in the Moravian church the peculiar and solemn services of passion week were begun, and will be continued every evening during the week.

Messrs. Weeks & Potter have never doubted the specific properties of Cuttcura, Cuttcura Resolvent and Cuttcura Soap, for the speedy, permanent and economical cure of Humors of the Blood, Skin and Scalp. They are, however, astonished at their universal success; for it was to be expected that in the hands of some hey would fail solely from spasmodic or ignoant use of them.

They are unable to say without fear of conradiction that no remedies ever achieved in the short space of one year the number of wonderful cures performed by the Cuticura Remedies.
